

Protest goes to the dogs

A dog named Negra stands near the coffin of its partner during a protest north of Bogota, Colombia, on Friday over a court ruling banning dogs from apartment buildings. Dog's sign says: "What about our rights?"

home of about 24 acres of landfill added to the island in stages after 1834, because that area falls on the New Jersey side.

"New York knows now as it has known since at least 1834 that its sovereignty ends at the middle of the river," Yannotti said.

He also rejected New York's efforts during more than 20 days of testimony to establish continuous sovereignty.

New York traces its claim to before the Revolutionary War and contends that New Jersey's interest arose strongly in the last decade when it realized the island could be a tourist attraction.
